

REVOLUTION ENGINE

Having played throughout the province of Alberta testing out songs in the band's growing repertoire, Revolution Engine set out to capture the energy that had become a trademark of their live shows. Playing many of Alberta's great venues (Station on Jasper, Forge on Whyte, Studio Music Foundation, Bohemia, The Vat, Distortion, The Blind Beggar Pub) and a number of the festivals, the band set its sights on a raw and visceral feel for this new album: "Fist & Flame".

Revolution Engine's sound is driven by fat grooves, grinding riffs, and compelling verse. This alchemy of hard rock, hip-hop, and spoken-word influences, fused with a unifying message on many issues of the day, has produced an arresting experience for everyone that encounters this band.

Many of the tracks on this album serve as clarion calls to the conscience of the listener. The first single, "Business Suit Bonfire", is a call to not allow the wills of the corporate machines to consume and destroy, while burying their misdeeds. The track features hard hitting riffs, righteous anger, and a call to change.

When asked about a Revolution Engine show, fans consistently site the band's energy, passion, and sincerity.

The band set out from the start to build a sound around a message of hope and purpose, drawing influence from Rage Against The Machine, P.O.D., Linkin Park, and Papa Roach, but with a twist on the concept of protest music by promoting that the listener rise above rather than against.
